This booklet introduces the section of the MCT between Hachinohe and Miyako.

The Northern Michinoku Coastal Trail

On the afternoon of March 11, 2011, a 9.0-magnitude earthquake struck off Japan's Sanriku Coast, triggering a tsunami that would claim more than 18,000 lives and devastate scores of local communities. In the years since, the affected Tohoku region has had to rebuild essential infrastructure and local economies along hundreds of kilometers of coast, not to mention trying to cope with the emotional toll of the disaster. As part of the long-term planning, there has also been the construction of a hiking trail—completed in 2019—spanning more than 1,000 kilometers (620 miles) from Hachinohe City in Aomori Prefecture south to Soma City in Fukushima. Called the Michinoku Coastal Trail, it has become not just one of Japan's great hikes, but also a symbol of rebirth and hope.

This booklet covers the northernmost 240 kilometers (150 miles) of the Michinoku Coastal Trail, as it runs from Kabushima Shrine in Hachinohe to breathtaking cliff-top views in Fudai and Tanohata villages. This route is a stretch of trail that traverses a range of scenery and terrain, from fields of wildflowers to rocky shoreline, tranquil coves to sandy beaches. But more than that, it's a trail that connects people.

Planned and built in close collaboration with locals, the Michinoku Coastal Trail offers travelers a way to slowly immerse themselves in local culture, whether that's visiting everyday fish markets, taking in traditional dance performances, sampling regional foods, or just stopping to talk to the people they meet along the way. In a region that has long gone under the radar, the Michinoku Coastal Trail is a way to truly go off the beaten path: to experience Japan as a traveler not a tourist.

The Trail & Trail Concept

This section introduces how to enjoy walking the top 240 km(150miles) section of the over 1,000 km Michinoku Coastal Trail route from Kabushima in Hachinohe, Aomori, the northern terminus of the trail, to Miyako in Iwate via a combination of section hiking and riding local trains.

We often hear people say that they want to walk the Michinoku Coastal Trail! but...
"I don't know what I need"
"Where should I start walking?"
"What should I do with my luggage?"

Therefore, we thought about what we could do to solve such issues, thus increasing the number of people who are currently walking, as well as increasing the people who want to start walking non-stop.

This is where the idea of "Trail and Train" was born. We want to show how easy it is to take the Shinkansen and local trains to a nearby spot and then enjoy the trail. Even when we first started walking, we found that it can be difficult to understand the timetables and where to access the trail from and what to do with larger luggage. Once we actually started walking, we found ourselves wanting to stop and eat various local foods along the way and learn more about the local area, rather than just walking non-stop.

Based on firsthand experience as hikers, we have created a new way of walking called "Trail & Train" by organizing information about routes that can be walked as section hikes utilizing the local trains, and having your luggage transported from one hotel to the next, so you can walk with just a light pack.

This booklet not only lists recommended routes, including train times, it also lists information such as places to see, things to eat, and more along the route, as recommended by local guides. We hope that it will be helpful for your trail trip.

The trail cannot continue without people walking and enjoying it. That is why we would like to increase the number of people walking not only for the continuation of the trail, but also to interact with the local community.

First Challenge

This section introduces how to enjoy walking the 240 km (150 miles) section of the over 1000 km Michinoku Coastal Trail route from Kabushima in Hachinohe City, Aomori Prefecture, the start and end point, to Miyako City, Iwate Prefecture, by section hiking, making good use of the train. We hope you will take advantage of this as your first trail challenge.

※Section Hike: A thru-hike refers to walking the entire length of a long trail at once, whereas a section-hike refers to walking only one section of the trail.

"Walking +1" - More than just walking, it's about immersing yourself in the local experience.

A journey during which you enjoy diverse terrain, discovering the magic of Japan's northeastern coast.

The Michinoku Coastal Trail, created with the involvement of local residents, is designed to give you a view of the daily lives of people living in the region. Visit the local fish markets and savor the delicious offerings of Sanriku. Engage in traditional dances and immerse yourself in the local culture. Most importantly, interact with the people you meet along the way. Be more than a tourist, savor the trail as a traveler. That's the true charm of the Michinoku Coastal Trail (MCT). For those looking to start their trail adventures, local businesses collaborate to encourage more people to walk and love the MCT. They have introduced "Trail & Train" section-hike plans, combining train journeys with walking. They propose model hikes for enjoying the trail this way, focusing on the 240 km (150 miles) in the Northern Sanriku area from Hachinohe to Miyako. Additionally, you can find dedicated tours and various services on a specialized website.

"Connecting people through trails - Meet and Greet"

Local-Guided Programs:

Walking is not just about enjoying magnificent scenery. Wouldn't it be wonderful to say, 'I'm on my way to meet someone!' There are many people waiting for you along the trail. Interacting with locals is one of the joys of the journey. The city of Miyako in Iwate, being a port town, hosts many fishing boats, including those for Pacific saury and salmon. Here, local taverns in Miyako have formed a unique drinking district. Explore the charm of Miyako through a walking tour of these distinctive streets. With a local trail guide, you'll not only discover the local nightlife but also gain insights into the trail. The Taro district in Miyako suffered extensive damage during the Great East Japan Earthquake. Over a decade later, with ongoing reconstruction efforts, Taro focuses on conveying the earthquake and tsunami experiences to future generations through Taro Tourist Hotel (an artifact of the tsunami) and disaster prevention guides. Get a feel for the current town and coastal levees through cycling. Visit a facility that has revived the salt-making culture of the Sanriku region dating back to the Edo period. Enjoy a factory tour, experience making mild and flavorful salt from seawater, and learn how to make rice balls from locals. Take them with you for a snack while you hike the trail!

① Bar Hopping in Miyako - Discover Miyako's Unique Izakaya Culture

Miyako City in Iwate Prefecture, being a harbor town, hosts many fishing boats like mackerel pike and Salmon in Miyako Port. Local Izakayas have formed their unique drinking alleys. Explore the charm of Miyako through a walking tour of these distinctive Izakaya streets. With a local trail guide, you'll not only discover the local nightlife but also gain insights into the trail.

② Miyako E-Bike Experience Tour - Revitalization of Taro in Miyako City

Taro district in Miyako City suffered extensive damage during the Great East Japan Earthquake. Over a decade later, with ongoing reconstruction efforts, Taro focuses on conveying the earthquake and tsunami experiences to future generations through Taro Tourist Hotel (a tsunami remnant) and disaster prevention guides. Experience the current town and coastal levees through cycling.

③ Salt Making Experience at Fisherman's Hut "Banya" and Rice Ball Lunch with Homemade Salt

Visit a facility that revives the salt-making culture of the Sanriku region dating back to the Edo period. Enjoy a factory tour, experience making mild and flavorful salt from seawater, and learn how to make rice balls from locals. Carry the handmade salt as trail food, convenient for your afternoon trail walk.

A trip to carve your own footprints while enjoying the varied terrain.

The Michinoku Coastal Trail was created with the involvement of local residents so that you can feel the daily lives of the people of Sanriku as you walk. Visit local fish markets to savor Sanriku delicacies. Experience traditional dance and immerse yourself in local culture, talk with the locals you'll meet along the way! Experience the trail as a traveler rather than a tourist. This is the real attraction of the Michinoku Coastal Trail. This site introduces a 240km section hike from Hachinohe to Tanohata.

I think walking the trail during the winter is best. In November, there are still many areas where you can see autumn leaves, and in December the leaves fall, giving you a great view of the ocean normally blocked by the foliage. It feels great to walk along the coast while stepping on crunchy fallen leaves. The trail also feels so special in the clear early morning air with a slightly chill breeze and the morning sun rising over the ocean. The coast rarely has much snow on the ground, making it great to enjoy all year round.

GOTO Mitsumasa

The Michinoku Coastal Trail offers chances to experience people's lives and culture, history, and food culture that has been passed down generations, all while enjoying interactions with locals as you walk.

The greatest attraction is the abundance of spots where you can experience the dynamic coastal landscape. The unique Rias coast boasts some of the most beautiful cliffs in Japan, and the glorious natural features of the area are all on display.

There are also sections where trains run, such as the JR Hachinohe Line and the Sanriku Railway Line, so why not ride the train while you're here? The unique pleasures of the coastal trail await you all. Please come and join us walking the Michinoku Coastal Trail.

KANGYU Toshikazu

The Michinoku Coastal Trail is not just a walking trail, but a trail where you can enjoy the culture, history, food, and scenery of the area while walking. That is why I recommend that you take time to walk and experience what each place has to offer. For example, you can enjoy a meal with local people at fish market, participate in the Hirono emotion activity, make salt in the traditional way, or kayak out to sea and enjoy the scenery from a different perspective. Why not experience the charm of a trail that can only be encountered here?

SHINA Katy

Hello! Welcome to the Michinoku Coastal Trail! Those of us who live along the trail look forward to meeting hikers in our daily lives.

I recommend meeting all the residents who live here as you walk. We have lived close to the ocean since we were small children, and have lived in harmony with both the ocean's bounty and sometimes its harshness. We have crossed mountains and descended into valleys to live in small communities. Hikers have taught us just how special these places are. If you see us as you walk, please say hello! Sometimes we are too embarrassed to say hello first.lol

MAEKAWA Masaaki

The Kita Sanriku coast has a series of paths where you can feel the magnificence of the sea and the peacefulness of the forests. Among all the amazing areas, I recommend the Tanohata area.

From Tanohata Station to the Tsukuehama Banyagun area, you can feel the memory of the earthquake and the reconstruction of the area. From the Tsukuehama Banyagun to Kitayamazaki cliffs, the path continues with a steep elevation, so take it easy and use public transportation such as cabs to get around.

The Michinoku Coastal Trail course will give you a sense of enjoyment and awareness of "traveling" by walking.

Let's enjoy it together!

AKASAKA Kouta

Experience the essence of "hometown Japan" on the "Michinoku Coastal Trail." As you walk, locals warmly greet you in regional dialects, creating comforting moments for hikers. In the Miyako area, you'll encounter diverse features of the Michinoku Coastal Trail, including nature trails where you can walk to the sound of waves, challenging routes with continuous ups and downs offering coastal panoramas, and shorter paths perfect for those taking their first steps. Each trail lets you feel the unique charm of Michinoku Coastal, making it a journey filled with local warmth and breathtaking coastal views.

SASAKI Yosuke

Hachinohe to Tanesashi Coast

Northernmost starting point

A day hike from the northernmost trailhead

Sitting atop a small hill protruding into the Pacific, no other shrine in Japan looks quite like Kabushima, at least not during gull breeding season. February to early August, close to 30,000 gulls swirl and squawk on and above the shrine's grounds, creating a very distinctive starting point for an epic hike.

That's because, as well as being a protected breeding ground for birds and a place where fisherman have long come to pray for safety at sea, Kabushima Shrine now also marks the northernmost trailhead of the entire Michinoku Coastal Trail, from where it runs south for just over 1,000 kilometers until reaching Soma City in Fukushima.

Down the Coast to Tanesashi

Following the trail south from Kabushima for several hours offers a taste of the entire Michinoku Coastal Trail. From sandy beaches to the rocky reefs of Cape Tamurazaki, there is an incredible diversity of scenery.

After about 10 kilometers, the trail then winds its way to the striking Tanesashi Coast – once a pasture for horses but now a place where locals come to picnic, walk their dogs, and simply relax in nature. If you are hearty enough to brave a hike here when chilly winds whip off the ocean in winter, the reward is an expansive snowscape. In summer, with the grass a lush green and waves breaking onto the craggy shore, it almost feels like you've stepped onto a golf course.

Of course, like any section of the Michinoku Coastal Trail, the journey from Hachinohe to Tanesashi has more to it than fresh air and views. Stop by the Tanesashi Kaigan Information Center and you'll also find opportunities to immerse yourself in local culture. A tour desk at the Center can help arrange lunch tours to fisherman's huts, bar hopping evenings back in central Hachinohe, outdoor yoga sessions, and many other activities. You can also pick up handy maps and get information from staff at the Center about conditions on the trail ahead.

Local Flavor Before Hitting the Trail

The Michinoku Coastal Trail was created not just as a means to protect nature and help revitalize the communities along the coast, but to be a pathway through which travelers can connect with locals. There's arguably no better place for that than the restaurant-packed yokocho of Hachinohe.

The term yokocho literally means alleyway but across Japan is also used to describe side streets packed with small bars and restaurants. In the center of Hachinohe are more than half a dozen of them, including Miroku Yokocho and its 26 counter-seat-only eateries, each so cramped they can just about squeeze in seven or eight customers sat shoulder to shoulder. Friendly and lively, the yokocho atmosphere can melt any language barrier, while the eateries themselves offer up all sorts of local specialties, from freshly landed squid and mackerel to warming senbei-jiru hotpots.

If you are in Hachinohe on a weekend, it's also worth setting an early Sunday alarm for the Tatehana Wharf Morning Market, to see where some of the produce used at Miroku Yokocho comes from. With close to 300 stalls that between them sell everything from seafood and farm produce to regional street food, it's a must-visit for any foodie.

Planning a Hachinohe to Tanesashi hike

For more on this part of the trail, the Ministry of the Environment's Michinoku Coastal Trail website has a downloadable, one-day hiking guide that outlines the key sites along the way, but also details trail etiquette, lists emergency contact numbers, and offers tips of what gear to bring: everything you need to stay safe and enjoy the journey.

AREA 2

HASHIKAMI — HIRONO

Hashikami to Hirono

To the Trail of Changing Perspectives

Climbing to Mt. Hashikamidake

The trail between Hashikami and Hirono is about 55 km long. Here, a different landscape emerges.

In Hirono, the trail takes you away from the coastline, which is right at sea level, to Mt. Hashikamidake, about 740 meters above sea level.

In Hirono, you can enjoy interacting with locals as well as eating delicious food.

Gagyuzan, or "Gagy Mountain," is a mountain nicknamed by locals because of its gently sloping shape, which looks like a cow lying down. There is actually a ranch here, and grazing cattle can be seen on the trail.

The view from the top of the mountain is spectacular, with magnificent views of the coastline from Rikuchu to Shimokita, the city of Hachinohe, and the mountains of Iwate. The sunrise over the Pacific Ocean and the sunset over the Hakkoda mountain range allow visitors to fully enjoy the beauty of nature.

Connecting with local people

At Hamanasu-tei, three generations of the Niwa family offer advice on walking the trail while serving local seafood such as sea urchins and ascidians. At the Shukudo fishing port in Hirono Town, you can watch the fish being landed, while at the Taneichi shopping street you can enjoy conversations with shopkeepers. On the coast of Kuji City, you can watch the Ama-chan divers free diving to catch abalone and sea urchins. No matter where you walk, the slower you walk, the more you will experience the charm of the Michinoku Coastal Trail, and the more conversations and memories you will have, thus increasing your understanding of this little-known corner of the Tohoku region.

HIRONO — KUJI — NODA

Hirono to Kuji end Noda

A trail that connects people

Feel everyday life

Roughly 45 kilometers of trail separate Hirono and the small city of Kuji, and like other trail sections hikes, this section is punctuated with both moments of scenic beauty and glimpses of everyday life.

Continuing the spiritual theme, you can visit shrines like the hilltop Kanayama Shrine for wide views across Yagi Port.

Around Kuji, the trail also takes in distinctive rock formations, like the helmet-shaped Kabuto Rock on the rugged Kosode Coast and a striking granite platform called Samurai Rock—the latter said to take its name from a feudal lord who rested upon the rocks when visiting to survey tsunami damage in the early 1600s.

In Noda Village, you can see the scenery of a traditional salt-making process with a history of 400 years.

The entire village was built in an environmentally conscious manner, using red pine trees, some 10,000 of which were washed away by the 2011 tsunami. Here, you will be able to experience the careful thought and skill of the local people.

In this way, the trail is full of encounters and interactions with people.

A trail that connects hikers to locals

Take the time to travel slowly and mingle with locals. This stretch of trail offers a reminder that scenery is just one of many parts of the Michinoku Coastal Trail experience.

"At the end of the day, the people here are the real attraction of the trail," says Ms. Shisuko Niwa, who runs a seafood restaurant called Hamanasu-tei in Hirono. "Here and there, you meet interesting people (locals and hikers) all along the trail...that's the charm."

In Hamanasu-tei's case, you meet three generations of the Niwa family, serving up local seafood specialties such as sea urchin (uni) and sea squirt (hoya), but also happy to give advice about the trail ahead. Elsewhere, at Hirono's lively Shukunohe harbor, you'll see fishermen unloading their catches, while at the Taneichi shopping district there are plenty of shop owners ready for a chat. In Kuji, you might see female Ama divers, who free dive to catch abalone (awabi) and sea urchin along the coast. Whichever part of the trail you hike, the slower you go, the more of the Michinoku Coastal Trail you discover; the more conversations and memories you'll make; the more you'll begin to understand this lesser-known corner of Japan.

FUDAI ———> TANOHATA

Fudai to Tanohata

Trail to feel the Sea Alps

FUDAI TO TANOHATA

The Michinoku Coastal Trail in a nutshell

The Michinoku Coastal Trail can be walked in one epic, 1,000-kilometer hike, but also offers dozens of sections ideal for one- or two-day adventures. Take the 26 kilometers of trail in Fudai and Tanohata villages: with local markets, fishing ports, sweeping clifftop views, sandy beaches, wooded pathways, friendly inns, and so much else, it packs in many of the elements that make the Michinoku Coastal Trail so special.

The Flavors of Fudai

Hiking through Fudai, there's a good chance you will meet Tokio and Ruriko Aisa, a husband-and-wife team running a small market called Kiraumi. Located right on the trail and being the only building by the picturesque Fudai Beach, it's impossible to miss. The Aisas opened Kiraumi after the 2011 tsunami, as the part of the community effort to rebuild their village. Today, it serves as a casual meeting place for locals, but also somewhere hikers can get a taste of local food culture.

"We are a small village, but we have a lot of delicious food for travelers to try - that's something I hope hikers will remember Fudai for," says Ruriko. "At Kiraumi, we sell the fish my husband catches, as well as regional specialties such as bottles of salted sea urchin and wakame seaweed."

"We have lots of seasonal produce along the northern Sanriku Coast," adds Tokio, who has been a fisherman for close to 40 years, just as his father and grandfather were before him. "But I also want people to come and walk on the natural beaches here and think, 'It's so beautiful, the water is so clear and blue.' I hope the beauty of this place remains in their memory."

Nedarihama to Kurosaki

Not long after Fudaihama, there is plenty more natural beauty on show. After following a main road by newly built port facilities and floodgates, the trail reaches an ocean-hugging stretch called Nedarihama, where you walk close to waves crashing into the base of precipitous cliffs. You feel, hear and inhale the scents of the ocean here. Gulls and birds of prey fly above. Look out to the sea and you'll see fishing boats on the horizon.

It's gorgeous, but also adventurous, with patches of trail passing through dank, hand-dug tunnels, up and down ladders, and across beaches where you might well find yourself dodging breaking waves - very different to most coastal hikes.

Then there's a short, but steep climb up the cliffs, where you could break for the night at Kurosaki-so, one of many municipality-run inns along the trail: in this case, one with expansive coastal views, in-season seafood on the dinner and breakfast menus, and soothing public baths that are perfect after a good hike.

Hands-on Experiences in the "Alps of the Sea"

From Kurosaki-so, the Michinoku Coastal Trail reveals another of its faces, with several hours of up-and-down, wooded trail leading through bear habitat to another trail highlight—a viewpoint in Tanohata called Kitayamazaki. Here, wooden observation decks deliver sweeping views over jagged, tree-covered cliffs, which understandably have been nicknamed the "Alps of the sea."

Like many other trail sections, the pathway after Kitayamazaki also offers up opportunities to interact with locals and try hands-on experiences. At the rocky Tsukuehama Beach, you'll find a collection of banya fishing huts—rebuilt after the 2011 tsunami—that as well as functioning as working huts for fisherman are used by locals to provide educational workshops.

"The people here offer salt making workshops, diving experiences, and sappa fishing boat rides, but also the chance for visitors to learn about the local fishing industry and life as a fisherman from locals," says Mr. Takuro Kusuda, who leads an NPO in Tanohata that runs hands-on experiences. "There are also cooking classes, where locals show visitors how to prepare and cook fish using the catch of the day—whether that's sashimi, grilled or boiled—and then eat it together with local pickled vegetables and seaweed dishes."

If you opt for a trip in one of the small sappa boats, you'll be rewarded with a different perspective of the rugged shoreline and can also be dropped off further down the trail at Aketo Beach or the nearby Ragaso Hotel. The latter affords the opportunity to unwind in traditional-style accommodation (complete with multi-course meals and soothing public baths), while the chunk of damaged seawall left as a memorial at Aketo Beach serves as a reminder of the tsunami - and why the Michinoku Coastal Trail was built in the first place.

TANOHATA — IWAIZUMI — MIYAKO

Tanohata to Miyako

A Trail Through Japan's Stunning Landscapes and Local Life

Embark on a trail-walking journey from Tanohata to Miyako, covering approximately 72 kilometers (from Tanohata Station to Miyako Station). This trail offers a captivating experience of Japan's breathtaking landscapes and local life.

As you traverse this route, you'll encounter awe-inspiring landscapes, including towering cliffs and the stunning scenery of Jodogahama Beach. Moreover, you'll pass through areas that still bear the scars of the disaster, providing a glimpse into the resilience of the local communities alongside the beauty and potential threats of nature.

The distinctive feature of this area lies in the coexistence of natural beauty and the livelihoods of those living in harmony with nature. Passing through numerous fishing ports, you'll feel the vibrancy of local communities intertwined with the surrounding nature.

In Tanohata, the trail includes areas such as the Unosu Cliffs, featuring cliffs of staggering heights where nests of cormorants are nestled mid-slope. The panoramic view of 200-meter-high cliffs arranged in five rows like folding screens is truly breathtaking. In summer, enjoy the refreshing greenery, while autumn presents vibrant foliage. The contrast between the emerald sea and marine blue is a visual spectacle.

In Iwaizumi and Miyako, you'll pass through several fishing ports and settlements where traces of the earthquake are still visible. This trail not only allows you to experience the natural threats but also showcases the strength and resilience of the people who have faced these challenges and worked towards recovery.

This area is renowned for its spectacular views, including the Unosu Cliffs in Tanohata and Jodogahama Beach in Miyako, with its sharply pointed white andesite rocks present a coastline adorned with distinct expressions. The contrast between the green of the pine trees, the white rock surface, and the deep blue sea is truly a sight to behold.

Miyako City boasts an abundance of seafood and a variety of eateries cherished by the locals. You'll be welcomed by friendly locals, providing a perfect opportunity to experience the warmth of both the local cuisine and the community after a satisfying walk.

Beginner Route: "First Step Adventure" - Recommended for a 2-day, 1-night hike
